Mending the Past and Healing the Future with Soul ...

Healing, or mending the past, involves two actions. Among those of us who had experienced Joseph Bernier School, our reunion involved students remembering, sharing and crying. This helps to heal the psychological wounds, but it is only half the struggle. There is nothing worse than having those who abused you deny or rationalize away their abuse.

Try to avoid emotionally intense discussions as you begin the healing process. Seek support. It can help to share your experience and feelings with trusted friends or loved ones who can support, encourage and walk along with you on your healing path. Avoid people who tend to be judgmental, critical or biased.
